threttenthe[e] dai of the twelfthe moneth, that is clepid Adar, that is, March; and 14 ther goodis thei shulden forfeten. The sentence forsothe of the[f] epistelis[g] was this, that alle prouyncis shulden knowe, and go themself to the forseide dai. And thei, that weren sent, hee3eden to fulfillen out the heste of the king; and anoon in Susis heeng[h] the maundement fro[i] the king, and Aman solempneli makende a feste, and alle the Jewis, that in the cite weren, wepende.

CAP. IV.

1 The whiche thingis[k] whan Mardocheus hadde herd, he cutte his clothis, and is clad[l] with a sac, sprengende askis[m] to his hed, and in the strete of the myddil cite with gret vois criede, shewende the bit-
2 ternesse of his inwit, and with this weping vnto the 3atis of the paleis goende; forsothe it was not leful a man clad[n] with a sac to entre the kingis halle.
3 Also in alle prouyncis, bur3 townes, and placis, to the whiche the cruel bidding of the king hadde ful comyn, gret weiling was anentis the Jewis fastende, and 3ellende, and wepende, manye men vsende
4 for bed sac and askis[o]. Forsothe the childer[p] wymmen of Ester, and the geldingus, wenten in, and tolden to hir; the whiche herende is stoneid[q], and sente a cloth, that the sac don awei, he shulde clothin hym; the whiche taken he wolde
5 not. And Athac, gelding, clepid, whom the king hadde 3iue to hir seruaunt, she corouris of the kyng to alle hise prouynces, that thei schulden sle, and 'do awei[m] alle Jewis[n], fro a[o] child to[p] an eld man, litle[q] children and wymmen, in o dai, that is, in the thrittenthe dai of the tweluethe monethe, which[r] is clepid Adar[s]; and[t] that thei schulden take awei the goodis of Jewis[u]. Forsothe[v] the sentence 14
'in schort[w] of the[x] pistlis[y] was this[z], that alle prouyncis schulden wite, and make hem redi to the forseid dai. And the coroures, that weren sent[a], hastiden[b] to fille[c] the comaundement[d] of the kyng; and anoon the comaundement[e] hangide[f] in Susa[g], 'while the kyng[h] and Aaman maden[i] feeste, and 'the while[k] that[l] alle Jewis[m] wepten, that weren in the[n] citee.

JOB.

[Prologue on the book of Job[a].]

In this book of Joob is contened, first, the possessioun and prosperite of the iust man Joob; and, aftirward, how God suffride him to be temptid of Sathan, by los of hise worldli goodis, and of hise children; and afterward bi sijknesse of his owne flesch, and bi repreef of hise frendis, and of his owne wijf; and ensaumple to vs, that no man is temptid more than he mai withstonde, if he be iust and pacient, with preier of the help of God.

Incipit prologus in libro Job[a].

I am constreyned bi alle the bokis of Godis scripture to answern to the euele sawis of aduersaries, that sinfulli putten to me, that my remenyng I shulde make into[b] the[c] vndernymyng of the[d] Seuenti remenoures; as thoȝ[e], anent the Grekis, Aquila, Simacus, and Theodocian, or woord[f] of[g] woord, or sens of[g] sens, or of either mengd, and tempred maner of mene translacioun tolden out; and Origenes alle the volumes of the Olde Testament markide with signe of a ȝerde, and with signe of a sterre[h], the whiche or addid, or taken of Theodocian, sette in to the olde translacioun, prouende to han failid that is added. Thanne lerne my bacbiteres to resceyuen in the hoole, that in parcelis thei resceyueden, or to shauen awey my remenyng with ther sterre signes. Ne forsothe it may be do, that[i] whom they beheelde manye thingus to han lafte of, not the same men also in summe thingus to han errid thei knowlechen, nameli, in Job, to the whiche that if tho thingus, that vnder sterre signe ben addid, thou withdrawe, the most part of thi volume shal be kut of; and that only anent the Grekis. But and[k] anent the Latynes, befor that translacioun, that vnder sterre signes and ȝerde signes not ȝore we maden out, seuene hundrid almest or eiȝte hundrid vers failen; with the whiche the boc shortid, and to-torn and to-bite, sheweth openli to the rederes his foule defaute. This forsothe translacioun non remenour of the olde folewith, but of that[l] Ebru and Arabik woord, and other while Cire, now woordis, now sens, now either togidere shal tellen out. is spoken and other thing is don; as if thou woldest an eel or a laumprun holde with streite hondis, how myche strengerli[o] thou thristis, so myche the[p] sunnere it shal sliden awey. I haue remembrid me, Liddium, a maner doctour, that anent the Ebruis the firste was weened to ben had, for the vnderstonding of this volume not with fewe penys to han hirid, with whos doctrine if any thing I profitede, I wot neuere; this oon I wot wel, me not to han moȝt[q] remene, but that before I hadde vnderstonde. And so fro the begynnyng of the volume vnto the woordis of Job, anent the Ebruys the enditing[r] is prose; but fro the woordis of Job, in the[s] whiche he seith, Pershe the dai in the whiche I am born, and the nyȝt, in[t] whiche[u] it is seid, a man is conseiued, vnto that place wher befor the end of the volume it is write, Therfor I myself reproue, and do penaunce in colis and asken[v], ben vers of sixe feet, rennende with dactile and sponde feet, and for the langage of the tunge ofte takende and othere feet, not of the same silablis, but of the same times. Otherwhile also that sweete rym and sweteli sounende is told with noumbris[w] loosid with lawe; the whiche thing versifiours more than a symple redere vnderstonden. Fro the foreseide vers forsothe vnto the ende of the boc, the litle distincciouu that leueth with prose enditing is wouen[x]. The whiche thing if[y] to[z] any man is seen vntrouable, metre, that is, to be anent the Ebrues, and in maner of oure Flacci, and Graccy, Pindarie, and Alchei, and Saffo, that weren Grek poetis, or the Sauter, or the[a] Lamentaciouns[b] of Jeremie, or alle almest the Kanticulis of scripturis to[c] ben comprehendid, that is to seye, in metre, rede he Filonem, Josefum, Origenem, Cesariensem Eusebeum, and bi the witnesse of hem he shal proue me to sey soth. Here therfore myn houndis, therfore me in this volume to han trauailid, not that the olde remenyng I repreue, but that tho thingis, that in it or ben derc, or ben laft of, or certis bi the[d] vice of writeres depraued, shulden be maad more open bi oure remenyng; the whiche and the[e] Ebrues sermoun a parti wee han lerned, and in Latin fulli fro the[f] cradelis among gramarienes[g], and retorikis, and filosofres wee ben defoulid. That if anent the Grekis, aftir the making of the Seuenti, now the euangelie of Crist shynende, Jew Aquila, and Simacus, and Theodocian, Jewinge eretikis, ben founde, that manye mysterijs of the Saueour bi treccherous remenyng hidden, and nerthelatere in sixe exaumpleris[h] ben had[i] anent the chirches, and ben expouned of chirchemen; myche more I, a Cristene man, born of fader and moder Cristene, and the baner of the cros in my forhed berende, whos studie was to telle aȝeen laft of thingus, and to amende the depraued, and the sacramens of the chirche with pure and trewe sermounes to openen, or of proude men or of shreude reders I aȝte not to be repreued. Haue[k] that wiln olde bokis, and in rede skynnes with gold and siluer writen, or with capital lettris, as comunli men sein, chargis grauen out more than bokis, so that to me and to myne thei suffre to han pore scrowis, and not as myche faire bokis as amendid. Eithir forsothe translacioun, and the Seuenti after Grekis, and myn after the Ebrues, in Latin bi my trauaile is translatid; chese eche man that he wile, and proue he[l] hymself more studious than euel willid.

PSALMS.

[Prologue on the book of Psalms[a].]

THIS book Sauter is clepid, that is to seie, the book of songis of Dauith, and of Asaph, the chauntour of the temple of the Lord; wherynne is conteyned profesie of the comynge of Crist, of his birthe, and of his power and teching; of his passioun and his rising aȝen fro deeth, and of his ascencioun and of his comynge aȝen in the laste doom; whiche songis ben red in holi cherche in to wurschiping and preising of the Lord, knoulechinge his heiȝ maieste, and hise grete werkis; and that he do merci to vs, whanne we trespasen aȝens him, brekinge hise comaundementis, that we perische not for oure synnes.

Incipit prologus in librum Psalterij[a].

Whan it is knowe, alle the profetis to han spoke bi reuelacioun of the Holi Gost, Dauid[b] most of profetis to han spoken sum[c] wise in wrthiere and ouer passende maner, as the trumpe of the Holi Gost, than othere profetis. Othere forsothe profetis profecieden bi sum maner ymagis of thingus, and withinne coueryngis of woordis, that is, bi sweuenes, and viseouns, and deedis, and sawis; Dauid forsothe, thurȝ stiring of the Holi Gost alone, withoute vttermor helpe his profecie made out. Wherfor couenabli this boc is seid, The boc of solitarie spechis. It is also seid a Sauter, the whiche name it toc of a musik instrument, that Ebruli is clepid nablum, Grekli a sauter, of this Grek woord sallim, that is, touching; Latinli is seid an[d] orgne, that is of ten cordis, and fro the ouere part ȝiueth soun, bi the touch of hondis. Of that forsothe instrument at the lettre therfore is[e] nemned 'this boc[f], for at the[g] vois of that instrument Dauid song salmys beforn the arke in the tabernacle of the Lord; and as alle the sweete songus of that instrument weren clepid salmys, so and alle the particlis of this boc, or clausis. Also[h] aftir the spirituel vnderstonding wel of that instrument it taketh name, for as that instrument is of ten cordis, so this boc techeth the al aboute keping[i] of the ten hestis; and as that instrument ȝiueth soun fro the ouere part bi the touch of hondis, so this boc techeth wel to werche, not for ertheli thingis, but for heuenli thingus, that ben aboue. This boc stant[k] in an hundrid and fifti salmys, not biside the resoun of he3ere signefiyng; this forsothe noumbre is notid to most solempne mysteries. It stant[l] forsothe of ei3teti and seuenti. And ei3tety al oon signefieth that[m] ei3te, and seuenti the same that seuene. Ei3te forsothe signefieth the ei3tthe age of a3een rising; for sithen ther ben sixe agis of men liuende, and the seuenthe of men diende, the ei3the age shal ben of men a3een risende. Bi seuene forsothe is betocned the time of this lif, that is passid bi the oftesithes comyng of seuen da3es. Ri3tli thanne this boc is maad in such a noumbre of salmys, whos partyes signefien 'the beforseid[n] mysteries; for it techeth so vs in the seuenthe[o] of this lif to werken and to liuen, that in the ei3the[p] of a3een rising wee be not clad[q] with the doublefold cloth of confusioun, but with the stole of double glorifiyng. Or therfore in that noumbre of salmys it is maad, for, as wee han seid, this[r] noumbre stant[s] of ei3teti and seuenti, that al oon betocnen that[t] ei3te and seuene. Ei3te forsothe betocneth the newe testament, the fadris[u] forsothe of the newe testament to ogdoadi, that is, to ei3te deseruen. Thei kepen[v] forsothe the ei3the dai of the resurecciouu of Crist, that is, the sone dai, and the vtas of seintis, and abijden the ei3te of the a3een rising. Bi seuene forsothe[w] is betocned the olde testament therfore; for the fadris[x] of the olde testament serueden to ebdoady, that is, to seuene. Forsothe thei kepten[y] the seuenthe dai, and the seuenthe wike, the seuenthe moneth, the[z] 'seuenthe 3er[a], and the seuenthe 3er of the seuenthe, 'that is, the[b] fiftithe, that is seid iubile. Wherfore Salomon seith, "3if partis seuene and also ei3te." And Mychias, "Wee shul reren 'vp on[c] hym seuen shepperdis, and ei3te primatis." Weel therfore this boc in that noumbre of salmys is maad, whos partis betocnen the doctrine of either testament, that bi that be[d] shewid the hestis of either testament to be contened in this boc. This boc forsothe is deuydid bi thre fifties; bi the whiche thre[e] statis of cristene religioun ben betocned. Of whiche the firste is in penaunce, the secounde in ri3twisnesse[f], the thridde in preising of the[g] euere lastende lif. Wherfore the firste fifti is endid in penaunce, that is, the salm that begynneth "Haue mercy of me, God;" the secounde in ri3twisnesse[h], that is, this salm, "Mercy and dom I shal singen to thee;" the thridde in preising of the[i] euere lastende lif, that is, this[k] woord "Eche[l] spirit preise God[m]." And for these thre thingus techeth Dauid in this boc, therfore this threfold distinccioun of salmys is maad. Also it is to be notid, this scripture mor than othere to ofte ben vsid in chirche[n] seruysis[o], that therfore is don, for in this boc is the fulle ending of the hole boc of Godis woord. Heer forsothe ben discriued the meedis of goode men, the tormentis of euele men, the pleyne techyngus[p] of begynende men, the forth going of profitende men, the perfeccioun of ful comynge[q] men, the lif of actif men, the[r] spirituel beholding of contemplatif men; heer also is ta3t what synne doth awei, what penaunce restoreth, what the gilti of synne othenkende[s] seye[t], that is, "Lord, in thi wodnesse vndernyme thou not me," and in an other place, "Haue mercy of me, God, aftir thy mychile[u] mercy;" and what bi penaunce be[v] purchasid, whan he vnderioyneth, "I shal teche wicke[w] men thi weies, and vnpitous men to thee shul be conuertid;" bi whiche is shewid to[x] no man, hou myche euere 'trespasinge to be[y], to[z] mystrosten of for3iuenesse, and of the merci of God, taken to the mecnesse of othenking[a]; whan forsothe wee beholden Dauid, a man sleere and auoutrer, bi penaunce maad a doctour and a profete, to no man doende penaunce is laft place of wanhope; as of[b] the conuerting of Powil and his auaunsing in to apostil of the mercy of God pleynli wee ben certefied. Wherfore the chirche vsith in offisis[c], as the profecie of Dauid, the epistolis[d] of hym more than of[e] othere; and therfore this profecie is oftene[f] had in vse, for among othere profecies it passith in openyng of sawys; tho forsothe thingus that othere profetis dercly and as bi figure seiden of the passion and the[g] resureccioun of Crist, and of the euerlastende geteng, and of othere mysterijs, Dauid of profetis most excellent so euydentli openede, that more he be seen to euangelisen than to profecien.

Another prolog[h].

Dauyd, the sone of Jesse, whan he was in his[i] reume, foure he ches that salmes shulden maken, that is, Asaf, Eman, Ethan, and Iditym. Eiȝtety and eiȝte forsothe seiden the salmys, and two hundrid the vndersinging, and[k] Abiud smot the harpe. Whan Dauid hadde aȝen[l] broȝt the arke, aȝeen clepid fro Asotis in to Jerusalem aftir twenti ȝer, and abod in the hous of Amynadab, this he putte[m] on in a newe ʿȝokid karte[n], and broȝte in to Jerusalem; men chosen of al the kinrede of the sonis of Israel, seuenti thousend, of the lynage forsothe of Leuy, two hundrid seuenti and eiȝte thousend men; of whiche foure princis he ordeynede to ben beforn to the songus, Asaf, Eman, Ethan, and Iditym, to eche of hem deuydende two and seuenti men, vnder criende preising of the songis to the Lord. And oon forsothe of hem smot the simbal, an other the harpe, an other the hornene trumpe enhauncende. In the myddel forsothe of hem ʿstod Dauid[o], holdende hymself[p] a sautre; forsothe[q] thei wenten befor the arke in seuene queris, and the sacrifise, a[r] calf. Forsothe al the puple folewide after the arke. Thanne alle the salmys of Dauid ben in noumbre an hundrid and fifti, of whiche[s] alle forsothe nyne made Dauid himself, two and thretti han not superscripcioun, fifti and two and twenti in to Dauid, twelue in to Asaf, twelue in to Iditym, nyne to the sones of Chori, oon to Moises, two[t] in to Salomon, two in to Aggie and Zacharie. And[u] so alle the salmys of Dauid ben maad in noumbre of an hundrid and fifti. The deuyseoun[v] of salmys that ben clepid diasalmys ben in noumbre[w] of seuenti and fiue; the canticlis of grees ben in noumbre of fiftene. The firste salm to no man is asigned, for it is of alle. Therfore what other man is vnderstonde in the firste but the firste goten, that wrthili inscripcioun shul not be necessarie. Ferthermor for that salm maketh mencioun of Crist, as aȝen thi[x] Crist expounende the persone ʿto ben inscriued[y], vttirli thei han not withinne chaungid the ordre of storie. Wee reden and[z] in the titlis of salmys; but the salmys not after the storie, but aftir the profecie ben rad, so the ordre of titlis mai not disturben[a] the order of salmys. Alle[b] the salmys that ben inscriued to hym Dauid, pertenen to the sacrament of Crist, for Dauid is seid Crist.

PSALM XXXVII.

1 The salm of Dauid, in remembring of the saboth.

Domine, ne in furore.

2 Lord, in thi wodnesse ne undernyme thou me; ne in thi wrathe chastise thou 3 me. For thin arwis ben in ficchid to me; and thou hast confermed thin hond 4 vp on me. Ther is not helthe in my flesh fro the face of thi wrathe; ther is not pes to my bones fro the face of my 5 synnes. For my wickidnesses ouerȝiden myn hed; and as a greuous charge thei

PSALM CXXXIX.

The 'title of the[c] hundrid and nyne and 1 thrittithe 'salm. To victorie, the salm of[d] Dauith[e].

Lord, delyuere thou me fro an yuel 2 man; delyuere thou me fro a wickid man.
Whiche thouȝten wickidnesses[f] in the[g] 3 herte; al dai thei ordeyneden[h] batels. Thei 4 scharpiden her tungis as serpentis; the venym of snakis vndir[i] the lippis of hem.
Lord, kepe thou me fro the hond of the 5 synnere; and delyuere thou me fro wickid men. Which thouȝten to disseyue my go-yngis; proude men hidden a snare to me. 6
And thei leiden forth cordis in to a snare; thei settiden sclaundir to me bisidis the weie. I seide to the Lord, Thou art mi 7 God; Lord, here thou the vois of my bi-seching. Lord, Lord, the vertu of myn 8 heelthe; thou madist schadowe on myn heed in the dai of batel. Lord, bitake 9 thou not me fro my desire to the synnere; thei thouȝten aȝens me, forsake thou not me, lest perauenture thei ben enhaunsid.
The heed of the cumpas of hem; the trauel 10 of her lippis schal hile hem. Colis schulen 11 falle on hem, thou schalt caste hem doun in to fier; in wretchidnessis thei schulen not stonde. A man a[k] greet ianglere schal 12 not be dressid in erthe; yuels schulen take an vniust man in perisching. I haue 13 knowe, that the Lord schal make dom of a[l] nedi man; and the veniaunce of pore men. Netheles iust men schulen knou- 14 leche to thi name; and riȝtful men schulen dwelle with thi cheer.

1 The salm of Dauid.

Domine, clamaui ad te.

Lord I criede to thee, ful out here thou me; tac heede to my vois, whil I 2 shal crie to thee. Be forth riȝt reulid myn orisoun as encens in thi siȝt; the rering vp of myn hondis euentid sacri- 3 fise. Put, Lord, warde to my mouth; and a dore of circumstaunce to my lippis. 4 Bowe thou not doun my herte in to the[c] woordis of malice; to ben excusid excusaciouns in synnes. With men wirkende wickidnesse; and I shal not comune with 5 the chosen of hem. The riȝtwis man shal chastise me in mercy, and blamen me; the oile forsothe of the synnere shal not withinne fatten myn hed. For ȝit and myn orisoun in the wel plesid thingus 6 of hem; the domes men of hem ioyned to the ston ben sopen awey. Thei shuln 7 here my woordis, for thei myȝten; as the fatnesse of erthe[d] is rerid vp ‘vp on[e] the erthe. Oure bones ben scaterid beside 8 helle, for to thee Lord, Lord, myn eȝen; in thee I hopide, do not awei my 9 soule. Kep me fro the grene that thei setteden to me; and fro sclaundris of men 10 wirkende wickidnesse. Synneres shuln falle in the net of hym; syngulerli I am to the time I passe.

Lord, Y criede to thee, here thou me; ȝyue thou tent to my vois, whanne Y schal crye to thee. Mi preier be dressid as 2 encense in thi siȝt; the reisyng[p] of myn hondis be as the euentid sacrifice. Lord, 3 sette thou a keping to my mouth; and a dore of stonding aboute to my lippis. Bowe thou not myn herte in to wordis of 4 malice; to excuse excusingis in synne. With men worchinge wickidnesse; and Y schal not comyne with the chosun men of hem. A iust man schal repreue me in mersi, 5 and[q] schal blame me; but the oile of a synner make not fat myn heed. For whi and ȝit my preier is in the wel plesaunt thingis of hem; for the domesmen of hem 6 ioyned to the stoon weren sopun vp. Here thei my wordis, for tho[r] weren myȝti. 7 As fatnesse is[s] brokun out on the erthe; oure bonys ben scatered niȝ helle. Lord, Lord, for myn iȝen ben to thee, Y hopide 8 in thee; take thou not awei my soule. PROVERBS.

[Prologue on the book of Proverbs[a].]

In these Prouerbis of Salomon is contened myche prudence and vndurstonding, ȝouen to Salomon bi the Spirit of God, and acordinge in many places with the gospel of Crist. And as Crist techith in his gospel goostli wisdom oonli, so Salomon techith worldli warnesse, how a man owith to gouerne him prudentli in the world, and to be war of perels and mescheues, and to fle nedynesse, and to schewe bi his gouernaunce, that the prudence of God is with him, which is arettid as liȝt, and folie is arettid as derknesse.

Heere bygyneth the prologe in the booc off Prouerbys[a].

'To Cromacie and Eliodere, bishopis, Jerome sendeth greeting[b]. Joyne[c] the epistil whom ioyneth presthod; ȝhe, the chartre twynne not, whom the looue of Crist knytteth. Exposiciouns in Osee, Amos, Zacharie, and Malachie, the[d] whiche ȝee asken, I shulde han write, if it hadde ben leeful for siknesse. ȝee senden solacys of costis, ȝoure notories, and bokis writeres sustenende, that to ȝou most oure[e] wit trauaile. doun, and to his place turneth aȝeen; 6 and there aȝeen risende goth aboute bi the south, and turneth aȝeen to the north.
Enuyrounende alle thingus the spirit in cumpas passeth, and in to his cercles 7 turneth aȝeen. Alle flodis entren in to the se, and the se redoundith not; to the place whennes the flodis wenten out,

CAP. I.

The wordis* of Ecclesiastes†, sone of 1 Dauid, the[b] kyng of Jerusalem. The[bb] 2 vanyte‡ of vanytees, seide Ecclesiastes;
the[b] vanyte of vanytees, and alle thingis ben vanite. What hath a man more of alle 3 his trauel, bi which he traueilith vndur the[c] sunne? Generacioun[d] passith awei, 4 and[e] generacioun cometh; but the erthe stondith with outen ende. The sunne 5 risith, and goith doun, and turneth aȝen to his place; and there it risith aȝen, and 6 cumpassith bi the south, and turneth aȝen to the north. The spirit§ cumpassynge alle thingis goith in cumpas[f], and turneth aȝen in to hise cerclis. Alle floodis entren 7 in to the see, and the see fletith not ouer the markis set of God; the floodis turnen aȝen to the place fro whennus thos comen forth, that tho[h] flowe[i] eft. Alle thingis 8 ben hard‖; a man may not declare tho thingis bi word; the iȝe is not fillid bi siȝt, nether the eere is fillid bi hering.
What is that thing that was¶, that that 9 schal come? What is that thing that is maad, that that schal be maad? No thing 10 vndir the sunne is newe, nether ony man may seie, Lo! this thing is newe; for now it ȝede bifore in worldis, that weren bifore vs. Mynde of the formere thingis is not, 11 but sotheli nether thenkyng of tho thingis, that schulen come afterward, schal be at hem that schulen come in the last tyme.
I Ecclesiastes was king of Israel in Jeru- 12

For whan an other shal trauailen in wisdam, and doctrine, and besynesse, and to an idil man the purchasid thingus lefeth; and that thanne vanyte[r], and gret euel. What forsothe shal profite to a man of al his trauaile, and of the tormenting of spirit, that vnder the sunne he is tormentid? Alle the da3es of hym of sorewes and myseyse[s] ben ful, and bi the ny3t in mynde he resteth not; and whether is not that vanyte? Whether is it[t] not betere to eten and drinke[u], and to shewe to his lif the goodis of his trauailes? and that is of the hond of God. Who shal so[v] deuouren, and delicis flowen, as I? To a good man in his si3te God 3af wisdam, and kunnyng, and vnderstonding; to the synnere forsothe he 3af tormenting, and wast bisynesse, that he adde, and gedere togidere, and take to hym that shal plesen to God; but and this vanite, and wast[w] besynesse of mynde.

Wherfor Y ceesside, and myn herte forsook for to trauele ferthere vnder sunne. For whi whanne another man trauelith in wisdom, and techyng, and bisynesse, he leeueth thingis getun to an idel man; and therfor this is vanyte, and greet yuel. For whi what schal it profite to a man of al his trauel, and turment of spirit, bi[e] which he was turmentid vndur sunne? so and a synnere; as a forsworn, so and 3 he that soth swerth. This is the werste among alle thingis, that vnder the sunne ben don, for the same thingus to alle men fallen; wherfore and the hertes of the sonus of men ben fulfild with malice and with dispising in ther lif; and aftir these[s] to helle thei shul ben broȝt doun.
4 No man is, that euermor liue, and that of this thing haue trost; betere is a quyc 5 dogge thanne a leoun dead. Lyuende men forsothe witen themself to be to dien; deade forsothe no thing knewen more, ne han ouer meede; for to for-6 ȝeting taken is the mynde of hem. Looue also, and hate, and enuyes togidere persheden; and thei han not part in this world, and in the werk that vnder the 7 sunne is don. Go thanne, and ett in gladnesse thi bred, and drinc with ioȝe thi win; for to God plesen thi werkis.
8 Alle times be thi clothis white, and oile with the wif that thou loouest, alle the daȝes of thi lif of thin vnstablenesse, that ben ȝyue to thee vnder sunne[t], al the time of thi vanyte; this is forsothe part in lif, and in thi trauaile, that thou thing mai thin hond don, besili werc;

for nouther werc, ne resoun, ne wisdam, ne kunnyng is anent helle, whider thou and[u] I saȝ vnder sunne neither cours to ben of swifte men, ne bataile of stronge men, ne bred of wise men, ne richesses of taȝt men, ne grace off craftis men; but 12 time and chauns in alle thingus. A man wot not his ende; but as fisshis ben take with the hoc, and as briddes ben[v] caȝt with the grene, so ben taken men in euel sacrifices; as a good man, so and a synnere; as a forsworun man, so[v] and[w] he that greetli swerith treuthe. This thing 3 is the worste among alle thingis, that ben don vndur the sunne, that the same thingis bifallen to alle men; wherfor and the hertis of the sones of men ben fillid with malice and[x] dispisyng in her lijf; and aftir these thingis thei schulen be led doun to[y] hellis.

No man is[z], that lyueth euere, and that 4 hath trist of this thing; betere is a quik dogge* than a deed lioun. For thei that 5 lyuen witen that thei schulen die; but deed men knowen no thing more, nether han meede ferthere; for her mynde is ȝouun to forȝetyng. Also the loue, and 6 hatrede, and enuye perischiden togidere;

CAP. VII.

I am forsothe and a deadli man, lic to men, and of `the erthi[u] kinde of hym that rathere is mad, and in the wombe of the modir figured I am flesh. In time of ten monethis cruddid I am in to blod, of the sed of man, and of couenable[uu] deliting of slep. And I born toc comun eir, and lic maner fel doun in to the mad erthe; and the firste vois, lic alle, I putte out weping. I was nurshid in swathing clothis, and in grete besynesses; no man forsothe of kingis other hath bigynnyng of birthe. Oon entre is to alle to lif, and lijc issue. For that I desirede, and there is 3iue to me wit; and I inwardli clepide, and there cam in[v] me the spirit of wisdam. And I putte it biforn to reumes, and setes; and richesses I seide no thing to ben in comparisoun of it, ne I comparisounede to it a precious ston; for alle gold in comparisoun of it is a litil grauel, and as clei siluer shal ben eymed in the si3te of it. Ouer helthe and fairnesse I looued it; and I purposide for li3t to han it, for vnquenchable is the ly3t of it. Forsothe there camen to me alle goodis togidere with it; and vnnoumbrable honeste by the hondis of it. And I gladede in alle thingus; for this wisdam wente befor me, and I kne3 not, for of alle goodis it is moder. For withoute feynyng I lernede, and withoute enuye I comune; and the oneste of it I hidde not. Forsothe tresor it is withoute ende to men, the whiche who useden, parcener ben mad of the frenshipe of God, commendid for the 3iftis[w] of discipline. Forsothe and Y[i] am a deedli man, lijk[k] men, and of erthli kynde of hym that was maad first, and in the wombe of the[l] modir Y was fourmed fleische. And whanne it is oon, it may alle thingis; 27 and it dwellith in it silf, and renulith alle thingis, and bi naciouns it berith ouer it silf in to hooli soulis; it makith the frendis no man, no[s] but hym that dwellith with wisdom. Forwhi this wisdom is fairere 29 than the sunne, and is aboue al the[ss] disposicioun of sterris; wisdom comparisound to li3t, is foundun the formere. Forwhi 30 ni3t cometh aftir that li3t; but wysdom ouercometh malice. Therfor wisdom 1 stretchith forth fro the ende til to the ende strongli, and disposith alle thingis swetly.

sou3te it out fro my 3ongthe; and Y sou3te to take it a spousesse[t]† to me, and Y am maad a louyere of the fairnesse therof.
He that hath the felouschip‡ of God, glo- 3 rifieth the gentilnesse therof; but also the Lord of alle thingis louede it. For it 4 is the techeresse of the lerniyng of God, and cheseresse[u] of hise werkis. And if 5 richessis ben coueitid in lijf, what is richere than wisdom, that worchith alle thingis? Sotheli if wit worchith, who is 6 a crafti maker more than wisdom, of these thingis that ben? And if a man loueth 7 ri3tfulnesse, the trauels of this wisdom han grete vertues; for it techith sobre-nesse§, and prudence, and ri3tfulnesse, and vertu; and no thing is profitablere than these in lijf to men. And if a man de- 8

[Prologue to Ecclesiasticus.]

Off manye and grete bi the lawe, and profetes, and othere, that foleweden hem, wisdam to vs is shewed. In the whiche it behoueth to preisen Irael, bi cause of doctrine and of[c] wisdam; for not onli hem spekende, nedful it is to be wis, but also straungeres to moun, and seiende and writende, to be mad most wis. Myn elde-fader Jhesus, aftir that hymself he 3af more to besynesse of lessoun of lawe, and of profetes, and of othere bokis, that to vs of oure fadris ben taken, and he wolde write sum what of these, that to wisdam and doctrine pertenen, that men desirende to lernen, and to be mad wise men, of hem more and more thei taken heed in inwit, and ben confermed to the lawful lif. Also I moneste[d] 3ou to comen with wel[e] willingnesse, and with mor bisy studi to do lessoun, and to han for3yuenesse in tho[f] thingus, in whiche wee ben seen folewende the ymage of wisdam, and to defauten[g] in the making togidere of wrdys. For Ebru wrdis failen[h], whan thei weren translatid to[i] an other tunge. Forsothe not oneli this, but and that lawe, and profetes, and othire thingis of bokes, han not a litil difference, whan betwen[k] hemself thei ben seid. For in the ei3te and threttithe[l] 3er, in the tymes of king

Wisdom is schewid to us of fele and greet bi the lawe, and prophetis, whiche folewide hem. In which thingis it bihoueth to preise Israel, bi cause of doctrine and wisdom; for not which it is necessarie thilke spekers to be wise, but also straungers mou3e, and reders and writers, be also imade best itau3te. My graunfadir Jhesus, bisiloker to diligence of redyng of the lawe, and prophetis, and of othir bokes, that beth of oure fadris itake to us, thanne wolde he write sum thing here of, which that perteynid to doctrine and wisdom, as desires to lerne and of hem to be made wijs, more and more in biholdyng in inwitt, and to be confermed to laweful lyf. Therfore I warne 3ou to come with goode wille with the more bisili stodie the lesson to make, and haue in hem for3euenesse, in which as semeth folwynge the ymage of wisdom, and lackide compassioun of wordis. For whi al wisdom is the drede of God, and in that wisdom for to drede God; and the ordynaunce of lawe is in al wisdom. And the teching of wickidnesse is not wisdom; and the prudence of synnes is not good thou3t. Ther is wickidnesse of prudence, and cursidnesse is ther ynne; and ther is an vnwijs man, which is maad litil in wisdom. Betere is a man that hath litil in[a] wisdom, and failynge in wit in the drede of God, than he that hath plentee of wit, and brekith the lawe of the hi3este. Ther is certeyn sutilte, and it is wickid. And ther is a man, that sendith out a certeyn word, tellynge out treuthe.
